

Norway 2007

I have been thinking about a Kyusho seminar for some time but because of time. During 2007 I attended two, one with Jim Corn and the other with Evan Pantazi, organized in Norway by Harald, if you practice Kyusho and are a member of KI you know who Harald is.

Anyway about Norway, the lessons were well presented without any reference to style of martial art. Time went fast and Mr Pantazi was always there to answer questions and help, everything was done in a very relaxed and friendly atmosphere. Now to the point so to speak, I found it interesting and informative and something which made me think more about this art. At times it got a little painful but that's the only way to learn. At the moment I try to go to Henrik as much as I can to get more information.

I am not sure if I believe everything that is said about Kyusho but having listened and attended seminars it could be something to work with, so I will continue my studies and see where they take me.
